Whitley Penn Energy Partners Author PPC Practice Aids for Oil and Gas Audits

Fort Worth, TX (January 23, 2017) – Whitley Penn is pleased to announce that firm energy group partners John Vallance, Nathen McEown, and Kimberly DeWoody were contributing authors to PPC Practice Aids for Audits of Oil and Gas Entities, published by Thomson Reuters as part of their Checkpoint brand.

According to the publisher, “The Practice Aids help auditors comply with confidence, avoiding the risk of missing industry-specific disclosure items and audit procedures. The Practice Aids also include helpful examples and templates including confirmation and correspondence letters, such as engagement and management representation letters; audit programs; and checklists to help auditors complete their work faster and more efficiently.”

Thomson Reuters Checkpoint is the industry leader providing intelligent information to tax and accounting professionals. PPC Audit & Accounting products are extensively peer reviewed under rigorous guidelines established by the AICPA and monitored by the AICPA National Peer Review Committee. When the availability of the Practice Aids was announced, Thomson Reuters identified Whitley Penn’s contributors as industry experts.

“I am pleased to have contributed to developing this tool which will be utilized by thousands of accounting professionals within the oil and gas industry,” stated Whitley Penn partner and co-leader of the firm’s energy industry group, John Vallance.
